Chat has been a work tool for many years, but from Covid-19, the use of this tool is only growing. Just look at the growth of Slack: at the end of its 2020 fiscal year, 110,000 paid customers and by 2021, that number has increased to 142,000, according to Statista. However, Slack or other chat platforms may not be the ideal format for all forms of communication in the workplace. In some cases, i226; 128;s; Jump on a video call instead. While this is not à ¢ å € ™ it means that you should schedule video calls every single day, there are many cases where everyone would benefit from a video call against a chat. Be intentional with your communication choices and choose video chat in these five situations. When you switch to a hybrid workplace an estimated 80% full-time workers expect telecommunications at least three days a week even after the pandemic is over, according to Owl Labs. In this hybrid workplace, however, remote employees tend to feel excluded. Four of the five remote workers believe that being far away represents a challenge that employees in the office are part of 226; 128; T, up to 10% from 2019. While more companies embrace hybrid work as the future of the company, leaders must look at the video as a solution to keep members of the unified, collaborative team and on the same page. While the chat is precious for short conversations, it does not allow everyone to feel included or heard. P~ 160; When a face connection is needed to face the visual element of the face-to-face communication helps to strengthen a shallow meaning that can be done with the canã ¢ 128; t replica in writing. The non-verbal interchange of visual contact, facial expressions, body posture or hand gestures is necessary when the reason is $\pmu 128; \hat{a}^{\pmu}$ the danger that your message is misunderstood. In The Science of Effective Virtual Communication for Leaders, Leila Ansart, Founder of Leadership Impact Strategies, explains what happens without the appearance face to face: when there is an absence of information, like no visual signal, we do our best Hypothesis on the reality of what their face or body is doing. Our They like to complete the picture, so in the absence of facts, sometimes we put the signals together. When our brain fills empty spaces at moments like this, our understanding becomes our truth, and then we respond to information as if it were done. Don't leave. Don't leave. to make inferences and fill empty spaces. Be clear with your message by choosing a video call instead of a chat. When you need to centralize information sharing no one wants to be in a group chat room of twenty people, trying to keep up with every new message that goes through. Centralizing important information through a video call with a wider group of people makes it easier to reach everyone in a clear and effective way, without the additional burden of communication are easy to ignore, especially chat rooms if your internal chat tool is constantly used during the day. Think about it: get a chat, read it, return to an e mail, and then move on to something else, completely forgetting the chat. D 160? prevent information from being neglected or buried in members of your team~chat histories by sharing high priority communications via video. Planning a video conference in advance, rather than hitting it on a spontaneous mass chat line, also allows your team to be prepared. D 160? Instead of continuing a conversation based on the text, then forgetting about it the next day, they can listen, contribute, ask questions, provide feedback and absorb the content then and there. While video calls can be exhausting, etc. 128; It is an ideal format for hosting small opportunities for group collaborate on a great group call, which can be challenging, split into smaller groups where Three or four employees can brainstorming and collaborate before returning to the group. Platforms as zoom make it easy to divide groups into small rooms, allowing employees to connect and share while they are listened. This can also reduce the distractions of larger video or group group calls Threads because small group interactions can help keep employees engaged. While the video should be à ¢ â € to be your go-to format for communication, ità ¢ ô ™ is a valuable tool in certain situations. Being intentional when you choose video above chat to ensure that the employees are heard, connected and understood. I got it.
